

A Walk Through the Forest

One day, Hawantat and Ithical walk through the forest. They see a bunny on the forest floor. It is bloody and seems hurt.

She asks, "What can we do?"

I said, "We should take it with us."

I pick it up and we walk back to our house. I nurse the bunny back to health. We decide to let the rabbit rejoin its family in the forest. We cry at our departing with the rabbit. We are sad, we hope the rabbit makes it.

Time goes by... and we walk through the forest again. We see a rabbit that is limping. We think it is that one we saved. The rabbit hops toward us. I get down on my knees and it jumps into my arms. Hawantat follows and the rabbit jumps into her arms, too. We play with the rabbit. The rabbit hops the other way.

We follow the rabbit. It stops suddenly at a hole. It makes a noise and up comes another rabbit. We look down and see the bunnies. We are so happy.
